

BASIC SIGHT-SINGING AND EAR TRAINING FOR CHURCH SINGERS

RHYTHM EXERCISE 4.1 TIED AND DOTTED NOTES IN CUT TIME

INSTRUCTIONS FOR RHYTHM PRACTICE (HALF-NOTE PULSE)

1. Use a metronome app (see box at right) to establish a regular pulse or keep the pulse yourself.
2. Keep the pulse going by tapping it (inaudibly) with your finger or a big toe inside your shoe.
3. Speak or sing each exercise on the following slides, using the appropriate Kodály rhythm syllables for the note values you see — “ta” for half notes, and “too-oo” for whole notes.
4. Repeat each exercise until you are confident.
5. Record yourself using Flipgrid.com

VARIATION: Count the beats out loud while clapping the rhythm: half note=clap, whole note=clap-push.

Remember: Only say “ta,” “ti,” “too,” etc., on notes that are not tied. On tied notes, say “ee.”

STRONGLY RECOMMENDED!

If you have difficulty with any of the above exercises, take a step back:

1. print out the two preceding slides and write in the Kodály rhythmic syllables below the notes.
2. After practicing that way, return to the slides and try to read the rhythms just as they are presented here (without the syllables written in).

As we have already said, reading rhythms is of prime importance to being a good sight-reader!

A NOTE about ties and slurs in the following examples:

The examples that follow are taken from actual liturgical hymns. The slurs that connect notes sung on the same syllable are not ties, and should be pronounced as separate notes when using rhythmic syllables. Dotted notes, on the other hand, should be pronounced as dotted notes (using the “ee” syllable).

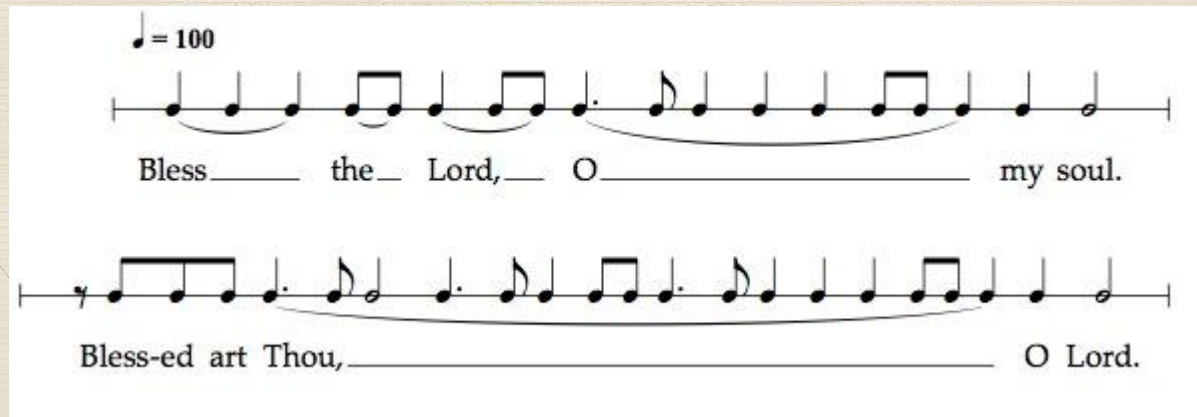

EXERCISE 10 – REGULAR AND IRREGULAR METERS

(EXAMPLES FROM CHURCH MUSIC)

In Unit 1.1 (Slide 12) we mentioned regular and irregular meters. Please review those definitions. Then, in the four examples that follow:

1. Set the pulse, referring to the online metronome
2. Practice speaking the rhythm, using rhythmic syllables, and record yourself.
3. For each example, determine whether it has a regular or irregular meter. How did you come up with the answer? Please send me an email with your answers.
